

Edward F. Breschel is an associate professor of sociology in the Department of Sociology, Social Work and Criminology at Morehead State University. He has a variety of research interests including the relationship between African-American religious affiliation or non-affiliation and education.

Stephen L. Eliason is a Professor of Sociology in the Department of Social Sciences and Cultural Studies at Montana State University Billings where he teaches courses in sociology and criminal justice. His research interests include the study of wildlife law enforcement, hunting, and those employed in the hunting industry.

Daniel Jude, M.A. is an Instructor of Criminology in the Department of Sociology, Social Work, and Criminology at Morehead State University. In addition to other areas of study, Mr. Jude facilitates courses on the Sociology of Deviance at Morehead State University.

Shondrah Tarrezz Nash is Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology, Social Work, and Criminology at Morehead State University. Her research explores religious non-normativity in the experiences of spousal partners and non-majority groups.

Demetrius Semien is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at Spring Hill College. His main research focuses on the experiences of criminal justice system employees and faith-based volunteers who help people transition out of prison and back into society; as well as factors that lead people to be incarcerated and recidivism.

Ben Stickle is Assistant Professor of Criminal Justice Administration at Campbellsville University. His research interests include policing, metal theft and deviance.

Richard Tewksbury is Professor of Criminal Justice at the University of Louisville. His research centers on issues of sex offender management, victimization experiences and expressions of sex, gender and sexuality.

Leonard Thomas is Department Head of Sociology at Jefferson Community and Technical College. His research interests are family, race, civil and political engagement.